Tamara Curry Announces Campaign for Charleston County Probate Judge

Charleston, SC — After more than 24 years serving Charleston County families as Associate Probate Judge, Tamara Curry announced her campaign for Charleston County Probate Judge, emphasizing experience, transparency, and compassionate service. She believes in putting people first by serving the citizens of Charleston County. Curry will run as a Democrat and challenge Republican incumbent Irv Condon.

“Families rely on Probate Court during some of the most sensitive and important moments of their lives,” Curry said. “Our community deserves leadership focused on accessibility, honesty, accountability, and professionalism.”

Curry’s campaign will center on expanding public education about probate services, improving access for underserved communities, and enhancing efficiency, integrity, and responsiveness within court processes. She is committed to ensuring that Probate Court practices reflect the needs of all Charleston County residents.

Judge Curry has built her career helping families navigate estates, guardianships, and protections for vulnerable adults and those suffering from mental illness or substance misuse. Her campaign emphasizes strengthening public trust in the Probate Court system and delivering clear, compassionate service when Charleston County citizens seek guidance.
